DR. GEORGE H. WRIGHT[1]

Dr. George Herdman Wright passed away Sunday, July 20th, at his home, Carroll Springs, Forest Glen. Dr. Wright was born on November 8th, 1858, at Cleveland, Ohio, eldest son of William Wallace Wright of Shelborne, Mass., and Elanor Herdman Wright, of Belfast, Ireland. His father, after active service in the United States Army during the Civil War, was for many years, a well known figure in realty and banking circles in Washington, D. C.

Dr. Wright's early life was spent in Buffalo, N. Y., where he attended public schools. He won a scholarship to Cornell University from which he graduated with honors in 1882. Having chosen medicine as his profession, he continued his studies at the Columbia Medical School, Washington, D. C. -- now George Washington University, from which he received his M. D. degree. Me spent two years more at Hanneman Medical School, Chicago, where he received his degrees in the then new school of Homeopathy.

[1] Obituary of Dr. George Herdman Wright, from unknown newspaper, from archives of Katherine Jane (Wilson) Mooneyham. Transcribed to computer 7/20/96 by Eric F. (Rick) Wilson.

On September 17th, 1885, he was married to Jessie Fremont Waite in Chicago. They removed shortly to his present home, where they opened the first Sanitarium in the immediate vacinity of Washington. The site chosen for this work, was the former house of Miss Nancy Carroll, last of one branch of the well known Carrolls of Maryland. "Carroll Cottage," inherited through an original grant from Lord Baltimore, was what was left of "Miss Nancy's" plantation of over a thousand acres, yet the beauty of the twenty odd acres and the wonderful water from medicinal springs, inspired this young Doctor and his wife and for over forty years they toiled for and served the community, unnumbered patients and devoted friends, attesting the unselfish work of Dr. and Mrs. Wright.

Dr. Wright was twice Master of the Kensington Lodge, No. 198, A. F. and A. M., Kensington, where he was made a "Member For Life," in recognition of his work there and in helping to establish the Lodge at Silver Spring, Md. He was Past High Priest of the Maryland Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and a Knight of the Royal Order of Scotland, in addition to being a 32nd Degree Mason, Scottish Rite.

From the inception of National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Dr.

Wright was for many years Physician in Charge. Associate Professor, at the request of the Maryland Medical Association, he gave a series of lectures in Baltimore on Neurasthenic and Psychopathic Disorders, on which subjects he as an acknowledged authority. He was a member of the Homeopathic Medical Society and one of the most well known workers in the establishment of the Homeopathic Hospital in Washington.

Elected for seven consecutive years, he guided the work, as President, of The Washington Lodge, American Theosophical Society. On a tour around the world in 1920-1921, Dr. Wright was especially interested in India, where he resided over eight months and was received with signal honors, among them being the courtesy of the personal living quarters of Sir Rabindranth Tagore, from whence he gave a series of lectures on Modern Hygene to Indian College Students. Returning home after a year and a half, he resumed his work at physician, both physical and mental with the numerous friends and admirers awaiting his guidance and kind wisdom.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Jessie Waite Wright, his children, Wallace W. Wright,

George Van Wright, of New York City; Mrs. Lucy Wright Trundle, Dr. Katherine W. Wright of Detroit Mich., and Frederick W. Wright, of Nashville, Tenn., and eleven grandchildren. Also one sister, Mrs. Louise Wright Perkins, and two brothers, S. Prescott Wright and William W. Wright.

Services on Wednesday, July 23rd, at 10 a. m., from his residence at Forest Glen.